As many of you know, on July 8, the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services and Education marked-up their FY2005 appropriations bill. This bill allocates funding for programs at the Department of Education, including the Perkins Loan Program. The House Subcommittee voted to eliminate the $98.7 million Federal Capital Contribution and to fund loan cancellations at $66.7 million, the same amount that was appropriated for FY2004.

The Senate has not yet marked-up the equivalent FY2005 bill. At the earliest, the Senate anticipates action on the Labor, Health and Human Services and Education appropriations bill this fall, but plans change daily depending on how one reads the tea leaves.

COHEAO has already responded to the cuts the House made to the capital contribution and will continue to educate members of Congress on why support for the Perkins Loan Program is necessary. COHEAO’s response is attached. Check your e-mail and upcoming issues of The Torch for information on how you can help support the Perkins Loan Program.

In other news, the deadline to receive a special COHEAO hotel room rate for the Mid-Year Meeting has been extended to July 16. Be sure to reserve your room before the deadline passes.

MID-YEAR MEETING INFORMATION

COHEAO Mid-Year Meeting to Feature Session on Check 21
Hotel Reservation Deadline Extended to July 16

On October 28, 2004 the Check Clearing for the 21st Century Act (Check 21) will take effect, bringing with it a variety of new issues and opportunities. COHEAO is proud to have Check 21 expert Dave Kurrasch from Global Payments speak at the Mid-Year Meeting on August 1-3 in Philadelphia, PA. At the meeting, Mr. Kurrasch will aid attendees in understanding what Check 21 is and how it impacts the higher education community.

For those of you who are unfamiliar with Check 21, it facilitates electronic transmission of checks and reduces check-processing costs. Federal Reserve Banks have already announced that they will offer new electronic check processing services in light of the legislation, and many banks have done so as well. Commenting on Check 21, Gary Stern, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis, said, “These steps are part of a forward-looking strategy that acknowledges the financial services industry’s ongoing evolution from paper to electronic processing.”

The Mid-Year meeting will also focus on several issues that have recently appeared as “live ones.” These include changes that are being required for electronic payment processing by NACHA and an update on other student aid-related issues including relationships with credit bureaus and information on several recent federal court decisions that will impact how student loans are treated when a borrower declares bankruptcy.

Reauthorization of the Higher Education Act of 1965, a process that will be back in full force early next year, will also be a major topic at the Mid-Year meeting. Sessions on reauthorization will feature key staff members from the House and Senate, representatives from a variety of higher education institutions and David Bergeron, senior advisor at the Office of Postsecondary Education at the Department of Education.

Also, Melanie Corrigan from the American Council on Education has just been added as a speaker at the meeting. She will discuss how schools can determine their federal capital contribution under the proposed allocation formula in H.R. 4283, legislation to reauthorize the Higher Education Act of 1965.

Congressman Chaka Fattah (D-PA) will welcome COHEAO to his home city and discuss key policy issues facing higher education and education-related tax policies and give his views on the Congress and what’s happening in Washington. Fattah is a senior member of the Appropriations Committee and previously served for a number of years on the Education and Workforce Committee.
U.S. Department of Education Ombudsman Debra Wiley will talk about her job and the issues that arise in it. Nancy Weiderspan, the new Board Chair of the National Student Clearinghouse, will be giving the latest on all of the Clearinghouse’s activities.

A draft agenda is posted on the COHEAO website at http://www.coheao.org, and one is also attached. The meeting will be in historic downtown Philadelphia at the Loew’s Philadelphia Hotel. To register, fax or mail the attached registration form or go to http://www.coheao.org. You can pay the registration fee by check or with a credit card via the web page. The deadline to register at the hotel is July 16 in order to be sure of receiving the special low COHEAO meeting rates. Don’t let it slip by you!

CONGRESS

House Subcommittee Marks-Up Labor-HHS-Education Appropriations Bill Senate Moves Toward FY2005 Omnibus Appropriations Bill

This looked to be a very busy week for the Appropriations Committees in the House and Senate on Tuesday morning. By the end of the day the picture had changed quite substantially. On Thursday, the House moved forward with a mark-up of the Labor, Health and Human Services and Education Appropriations bill for FY2005. In what appeared to be a congenial yet partisan meeting of the Subcommittee, the Chairman’s mark was adopted, reflecting the spending level requested by the President, but a different distribution of funds. The President’s top priorities—Title I of NCLB, IDEA and Pell Grants— received an approximately $3 billion increase between them. Since the Department of Education’s spending was held to a 2% increase or $2 billion over FY2004, other programs were frozen, cut or zeroed-out. Representative David Obey (D-WI) offered an amendment during the mark-up that would have increased education funding by $5.5 billion, but it was defeated by a party line vote.

Specific to higher education, while the Pell Grant program received an increase in funding, the maximum remained frozen at $4,050. Also, the bill did not fund the President’s $33 million proposal for Enhanced Pell Grants. There were a few funding increases in the bill: Gear-Up saw a 20 percent increase, TRIO saw a 1.2 percent increase and funding for historically black colleges and universities rose eight percent. Despite these increases, the Perkins Loan Program received drastic cuts with the subcommittee voting to eliminate the $98.7 million federal capital contribution to the program.

In the Senate, all progress ground to halt on appropriations bills after the Leadership failed to strike a compromise with the Democrats over how to debate spending bills absent a budget resolution. The lack of a budget resolution means that it takes only 51 votes, instead of 60 with a budget resolution, to pass amendments increasing spending. Many fiscal conservatives fear this prospect because of the budget implications and because they do not want to be forced to vote against education spending amendments before heading into elections in November.

Senate Appropriations Subcommittee mark-ups were postponed and the talk about omnibus legislation and lame duck sessions got serious after the mark-up scheduled for Thursday was scrapped. In a meeting with Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) on Thursday morning, education advocates were told to expect the appropriations process to drag on into the new year. Specter added that the Senate still had a few tricks up their sleeve to bring the funding levels in his bill above the House proposed measure.

Ted Stevens (R-AK), chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, has made comments that suggest that the FY2005 omnibus will consist of all appropriations bills, aside from defense, which is already in conference negotiations with the House. The omnibus would include the Homeland Security bill, which is scheduled to come to the Senate floor this month.

House Republicans Attack Higher Education’s “Lobbyists”

Yet another jab has been thrown at the higher education community from the House Republicans. House Committee on Education and the Workforce Chairman John Boehner (R-OH) and Subcommittee on 21st Century Competitiveness Chairman Howard McKeon (R-CA) have written to presidents of colleges and universities to “ensure that you and your institution have access to the facts” about the College Access & Opportunity Act, H.R. 4283.

The letter suggests that the “priorities of the lobbying community and those of parents, students and taxpayers” may be in conflict, thus necessitating the need for the two Chairmen to “debunk the myths” surrounding the Boehner reauthorization bill. The letter reviews the major controversial areas of H.R. 4283 of interest to schools and explains why each provision was included in the bill.

The letter also defends the decision not to increase the maximum Pell Grant by noting, “What we will not do is foster false expectations by authorizing unattainably high funding levels to score political points.”

Boehner and McKeon close the letter with, “We remain open to working with you and others in the higher education community to identify common-sense adjustments that can be made without compromising fiscal responsibility or making college less accessible for low and middle-income students and families.”
House Judiciary Committee Passes Privacy Legislation

Last week, the House Judiciary Committee passed legislation that would require federal agencies to take into account the impact a proposed rule would have on individual privacy. Introduced by Rep. Steve Chabot (R-OH), the “Defense of Privacy Act”, H.R. 338, would amend the U.S. Code to require agencies, when promulgating the final rule, to prepare and publish a privacy impact analysis that includes a summary of the significant issues raised by and changes made pursuant to public comments on the initial analysis. For more information on this legislation, visit http://thomas.loc.gov.

Senate Races to Watch

With November rapidly approaching, we thought it an appropriate time to cast a light on some Senate races to watch. This is by no means a comprehensive assessment, and one we will return to later in the summer.

One-third of the Senate is up for re-election this year, but five Democratic Senators are retiring, in addition to three Republicans. In Illinois, Republican Sen. Peter Fitzgerald’s retirement has opened the way to what many call the most-watched Senate race of the cycle. After a seven-person Democratic primary and an eight-person Republican primary, the dust cleared to reveal State Senator Barack Obama (D) to challenge former investment banker-turned teacher Jack Ryan (R). The race turned upside after sealed divorce proceedings were ordered open (The Chicago Tribune and other media sued for this), and Ryan was forced to drop out of the race. Who will replace Ryan remains to be seen, but no matter who it is, he or she will likely be far behind Obama in fundraising. Obama, if elected, could be only the fifth African-American to serve in the U.S. Senate.

In Washington State, two-term Sen. Patty Murray (D) is up against Rep. George Nethercutt (R). The Republicans have pledged to spend a lot of time and money on this race, and President Bush and Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) campaigned there recently. In 1994, Nethercutt upset then-Speaker Tom Foley (D), which helped to usher in Republican control of the House of Representatives.

Oklahoma Senator Don Nickles (R), chair of the Budget Committee, is also retiring. Rep. Brad Carson (D) is in the lead Democrat in the race for Nickles’ seat, giving him an advantage now as the Republicans fight amongst themselves heading towards a late July primary.

In the South, many wonder if the retirement of Sens. John Breaux (D-LA), John Edwards (D-NC), Bob Graham (D-FL) and Ernest Hollings (D-SC) will signal the end of the Southern Democrat (we’ve excluded Sen. Zell Miller of Georgia as he was just added as a keynote speaker at the Republican convention). In North Carolina, former Clinton chief of staff Erskine Bowles (D) will face Rep. Richard Burr (R). Bowles is running for the second time in two years – in 2002 he lost to now Sen. Elizabeth Dole (R). In South Carolina, Inez Tenenbaum (D) will face Rep. Jim DeMint (R). One of the last primaries of the year will be held in Florida, which has eight Republicans and three Democrats vying for their respective party’s nominations.
Below is a list of all Senators who are retiring or running for re-election in the 2004 cycle.

Republicans
- Bennett, Robert (UT)
- Bond, Christopher (MO)
- Brownback, Sam (KS)
- Bunning, Jim (KY)
- Campbell, Ben Nighthorse (CO) - retiring
- Crapo, Mike (ID)
- Fitzgerald, Peter (IL) – retiring
- Grassley, Charles (IA)
- Gregg, Judd (NH)
- McCain, John (AZ)
- Murkowski, Lisa (AK)
- Nickles, Don (OK) – retiring
- Shelby, Richard (AL)
- Specter, Arlen (PA)
- Voinovich, George (OH)

Democrats
- Bayh, Evan (IN)
- Boxer, Barbara (CA)
- Breaux, John (LA) – retiring
- Daschle, Thomas (SD)
- Dodd, Christopher (CT)
- Dorgan, Byron (ND)
- Edwards, John (NC) – retiring
- Feingold, Russell (WI)
- Graham, Bob (FL) – retiring
- Hollings, Ernest (SC) – retiring
- Leahy, Patrick (VT)
- Lincoln, Blanche (AR)
- Miller, Zell (GA) - retiring
- Mikulski, Barbara (MD)
- Murray, Patty (WA)
- Reid, Harry (NV)
- Schumer, Charles (NY)
- Wyden, Ron (OR)

INSIDE ED AND THE ADMINISTRATION

GAO Becomes “Government Accountability Office”

On Wednesday, the name of the U.S. General Accounting Office (GAO) officially became the “Government Accountability Office.” Legislation renaming Congress’ investigative arm and giving the agency flexibility in restructuring its workforce and attracting and retaining employees has been in the works for over a year, but the name change did not become official until after President Bush signed the legislation this week.

The GAO was originally established in 1921 in order to pre-audit the expenditures of federal agencies. However, its obligations would be expanded to include program evaluation and policy analysis, and today, less than 15 percent of the agency focuses on traditional financial accounting. According to Comptroller General David Walker, the new name is more reflective of what his organization “is and does” for Congress in the 21st Century.

Department to Hold Software Conference

The Department of Education has announced its 2004 Software Developers conference will be held in Arlington, Virginia on August 19-20, 2004. The conference is targeted at mainframe institutions, third party servicers, and software developers and providers. Attendees will receive information about changes and updates to ED’s Federal student aid application and delivery services. There is no fee for the conference. Information and online registration are available at: http://edeworkshop.ncspearson.com/swdAugust_04.htm.

Final Rule on Sevis Fees Issued

On July 1, the Department of Homeland Security released final regulations regarding the $100 fee that it will charge to most foreign students and scholars who are tracked by the Student and Exchange Visitor Information System (SEVIS). The final rules, which were published in the Federal Register, kept the fee at $100 despite concern from colleges. The $100 fee, which will be enforced once the regulations for SEVIS go into effect September 1, will be charged to foreigners using F (full-time academic), J (vocational), and M (exchange visitor) visas. Students that hold J visas and are employed as au pairs or camp counselors, and those in summer jobs or travel programs, will only be required to pay $35. The revenue from the fees will be put towards SEVIS’ administrative and enforcement costs.

FSA Releases Dear Partner on FISAP and Reallocation Process for Campus-Based Programs

The office of Federal Student Aid (FSA) at the Department of Education has released a Dear Partner Letter concerning the Fiscal Operations Report and Application to Participate (FISAP). The letter contains common questions and answers regarding the 2005-2006 FISAP. Questions cover topics including how and when the FISAP is due and what resources are available online.

To view the letter, visit: http://www.ifap.ed.gov/dpcletters/CB0409.html

FSA also released a letter regarding the reallocation of excess campus-based funds for 2003-2004. The letter contains common questions and answers about the reallocation process including which institutions need to complete reallocation forms and how to submit those forms.

INDUSTRY NEWS

Kerry Campaign Adds Edwards

After weeks of secrecy and deliberation, Senator John Kerry (D-MA) announced on Tuesday that he had asked fellow Senator John Edwards (D-NC) to join him on the Democratic ticket to be the choice for vice president. In a nod to where the future of campaigns are headed, volunteers and people who had signed-up at http://www.johnkerry.com/ were the first to publicly receive the announcement.

Since Tuesday, the new team has hit several battleground states, speaking in general terms about the economy, healthcare and national security. Meanwhile, Democratic Party leaders began meetings on Friday, continuing through Saturday, in order to finalize the party’s platform. This agenda will be adopted at the Democratic convention July 26-29 in Boston.
During the primaries, both Kerry and Edwards articulated different ideas for higher education. Kerry’s plan includes trading national service for college tuition credit and a college opportunity tax credit. While on the campaign trail Edwards had suggested that a way could be found to offer a year of free tuition for students attending public institutions. Now that the Kerry and Edwards teams have joined forces, changes to both plans should be anticipated. Current information is available under both the “education” and “college affordability” tabs on the web site.

Both Teresa Heinz Kerry and Elizabeth Edwards are expected to play active roles in the Kerry-Edwards campaign for the White House. Heinz Kerry has already spoken several times about childcare and early childhood education. During the primary, Edwards discussed the importance of afterschool programs.

For further information about the candidates, their families and policies, please visit http://www.johnkerry.com/.

Kerry Unveils Additional Higher Education Policies

On June 29, presumptive Democratic presidential nominee John Kerry revealed a new plan aimed at increasing affordability and access to higher education. His plan, which he said would prepare Americans with skills they need in order to succeed in the workforce, focuses on higher education, lifelong learning, math and science.

Kerry’s plan calls for more than 1 million people to graduate from college over the next five years. The steps Kerry would take include: strengthening the high school curriculum to better prepare students for college; encouraging colleges to raise graduation rates through public disclosures and financial rewards; expanding aid and controlling college costs, including offering $10 billion in state aid for state colleges that do not raise tuition faster than inflation.

Kerry’s education plan also creates a lifetime learning system, including: modernizing financial aid by eliminating the 50 percent rule for distance learning and making the application and disbursement process more flexible; and developing partnerships between community colleges and businesses.

To meet the nation’s growing demand for highly skilled math, science and technology workers, Kerry proposes to increase enrollment in math and science programs by offering new summer academies for teachers, as well as $300 million in innovation grants for girls and minorities.

Kerry plans to pay for his initiatives through other proposals he has introduced, including overhauling the FFEL program. For more details about Kerry’s plan, visit http://www.johnkerry.com/.

Judge Allows California to Implementation Personal Financial Information Legislation
On June 30, U.S. District Judge Morrison England cleared the way for the California state government to begin implementing its new limits on the dissemination of personal financial information. The ruling rejected a lawsuit filed by the Consumer Bankers Association, the American Bankers Association and the Financial Services Roundtable, who sought an injunction halting enforcement of the new CA state law, SB 1. The banking industry associations argued that CA’s ban on sharing consumer information among affiliated companies without first giving consumers a chance to opt out is pre-empted by the Fair Credit Reporting Act.

The judge rejected the bankers' request for an injunction and dismissed the case. Judge England’s opinion is on-line at: http://www.cbanet.org/Issues/FCRA/documents/sb1%20op.pdf.

Student Loan Interest Rates at All-Time Low

Student loan interest rates fell to a record low on July 1. Stafford Loan interest rates fell to 3.37 percent during repayment and 2.77 percent during in-school, grace, and deferment periods. PLUS loans fell to 4.17 percent. The new interest rates, which apply for the July 1, 2004 through June 30, 2005 period, could potentially help borrowers save thousands of dollars over the life of a loan.

“Student loans are a key component of many financial aid packages. They make the difference between going to college and not going,” stated Joe Belew, president of the Consumer Bankers Association. “They represent a great value for borrowers. They are also a great value for our country, which needs well-educated citizens to perform the jobs of the future.”

Report Finds Support for Public Higher Education Strong

The State Higher Education Executive Officers released a report this week demonstrating that state spending on higher education has generally kept pace with enrollment growth and inflation over the past thirty years. The report, State Higher Education Finance: FY 2003, points out that while state spending has increased and decreased over the years, when looking at it from a broader perspective, states were spending about as much per public-college student, in constant dollars, in FY2003 as they were in FY1970.

Some who are not quite as optimistic point out that the share of state revenues going towards higher education has declined in recent years and note that many states are facing increased budgetary pressures brought on by tax cuts, rising health care costs and other fiscal trends.

The report can be found at http://www.sheeo.org/finance/shef.pdf.

Recent ACE and CEF Activity

The Committee for Education Funding (CEF) and the American Council on Education (ACE) awaited Congress’ return from the July 4th recess before continuing their lobbying efforts to increase education spending. CEF and ACE are in the process of drafting comprehensive responses to the House Appropriation Committee regarding the Subcommittee’s funding nubmers. The CEF response will mention that the organization opposes the cuts made to the Perkins Loan Program. The ACE letter is still in development. The Washington DC office will keep the COHEAO membership updated on further association activities in response to this week’s mark-up as they occur.

The Honorable X
Appropriations Committee
X
Washington, DC 20510

Dear X,

The Coalition of Higher Education Assistance Organizations (COHEAO) urges you to reconsider the Labor, Health and Human Services and Education Appropriations Subcommittee’s decision to eliminate the $98.7 million Perkins Loan Federal Capital Contribution and restore the federal government’s commitment to the Perkins Loan Program. The Perkins Loan Program provides aid to the neediest students and without a federal capital contribution, thousands of students will be denied the ability to realize their dreams of higher education. In these difficult financial times students now, more than ever, need access to the Perkins Loan Program to fill the financial aid gap.

The federal capital contribution is needed to provide financial support to the growing population of students on campuses across the country. Even with the institutional matches, demand for Perkins Loans always outstrips supply for loan funds, especially given the low limits on borrowing of subsidized Stafford Loans. Over the past decade funding for new loan capital has decreased, and many institutions have been forced to provide more than the required match for these loans. Without a capital contribution, already thin financial aid budgets will be stretched even further to the detriment of students.

More than 2,200 postsecondary institutions have chosen to provide Federal Perkins Loans to their students over the past 43 years because they know the program works. As participants in the Federal Perkins Loan Program, we know firsthand the importance of Perkins loans to low-income borrowers.

At a time when access to education is increasingly important, we again ask that you restore funding for the Perkins Loan Federal Capital Contribution. We look forward to working with you and your staff. If you would like to discuss this issue, please contact our Executive Director Harrison Wadsworth at 202-289-3903.

Sincerely,
Jeanne F. Dotson
